

THANKSGIVING THOUGHTS

When the President proclaims to us, so he does every year, that Thanksgiving is at hand and that it behooves us to observe it, he gives us reasons why our hearts should be grateful and our spirits revivified. The crops have been good, he says, and work has been plentiful; we have prospered and grown richer; pestilence has not vexed us; a fair degree of success has attended our aims; we have been able to perform in good measure what has seemed to us our national duty, and our credit as a people stands high among the nations of the world. These are all sound reasons for thankfulness, but they need to be supplemented, if as individuals, we are to bring to Thanksgiving all the feelings and sentiments that it ought to excite.
