

TEACHING

Teaching is wildly exciting, adventurous, romantic, with no two days alike. The successful teacher loves what he teaches and whom he teaches. In the schoolroom, he is in absolute command, although in one sense he is as lonely as a captain on a battleship. He may receive good advice from his principal and colleagues; but when he enters his classroom, shuts the door, and looks into the faces of boys and girls, no one can help him except himself. His teaching and his discipline depends solely upon his mind and personality.

-- William Lyon Phelps
