HIGHER EDUCATION and THE RETURNING VETERAN

"Educational Hobos?" A recent Army survey indicated that approximately 650,000 servicemen expect to go to college after they are discharged. But even this bonanza may not be an unmixed blessing. University of Chicago's tart President Robert Maynard Hutchins voiced his fears in a Collier's article last fortnight. Excerpts:

"Educational institutions, as the big-time football racket shows, cannot resist money."

"The G I Bill of Rights gives (the colleges and universities) a chance to get more money than they have ever dreamed of.... They will not want to keep out unqualified veterans; they will not want to expel those who fail."

"Veterans unable to get jobs and offered a chance to live at Government expense simply by going to school will become 'educational hobos.'"

The Hutchins recommendations: 1) institute nationwide examinations to screen out veterans who cannot really succeed in or profit by college; 2) stimulate the colleges' discrimination and alertness by making them foot half the bill for each of their veteran students.

The Armed Forces Committee on Post-War Educational Opportunities for Service Personnel warned last week that the G I Bill may prove "extraordinarily costly - both in human and financial terms" if veterans are allowed to prepare for unsuitable or overcrowded vocations.
