Discourse of Introduction and Other Foul Sentiments

Erica de la Cruz

Tennessee State University

Follow this and additional works at: http://digitalscholarship.tnstate.edu/sketchestsu

Part of the English Language and Literature Commons, Fiction Commons, Philosophy Commons, and the Poetry Commons

Recommended Citation

Available at: http://digitalscholarship.tnstate.edu/sketchestsu/vol2/iss1/7

This Poem is brought to you for free and open access by the Department of Languages, Literature & Philosophy at Digital Scholarship @ Tennessee State University. It has been accepted for inclusion in Sketches: the Online Creative Arts Journal of Tennessee State University by an authorized editor of Digital Scholarship @ Tennessee State University. For more information, please contact XGE@Tnstate.edu.
I. Discourse of Introduction and Other Foul Sentiments.

Erica de la Cruz

Discourse of butterflies among innards,
so beautiful in intent and horrific all at once.
Flying insects that flutter and falter amongst bile and entrails,
in the sack of the stomach and encroaching upon the esophageal space.
They coat it with their own kind of honey as would bees
but without territorial or protective sting,
only disorientation and the faint (and somehow innocent)
sense of a smile
and accompanying knot are yielded.
Misguided and true…

…Unable to see past the end of the nose,
to be consumed by and even savor
the feeling of sweet and sour torture-
the fruity acrid taste of a corrosive stomach liquids
crashing like vitriolic tides over the eyes,
over the tongue
over chest
finally spiraling, somewhat settling down deep like a duodenal whirlpool.
Once the winged pestilence enters the dangerous space of the mind
it can no longer be expected to perform the mundane or menial tasks of everyday.
It has swarmed.
And you are warmed,
with clouded cerebral dalliance
and possibly fever.

What is accepted in the discourse is that these symptomatic arthropods will not cease until resolution;
A meeting.
The anticipation, hormones and chemicals rush about the body in the meantime in an odd carnivalesque consumption of organs and general bodily composition by wretched and whimsical moths.
It may be a point to consider for some that sometimes the discourse’s logic is faulty (although that’s yet another topic of discussion altogether)
because every now and again this resolution’s rendered lame
-that’s when they say miracles occur.
However, at the present time, what is to be understood is that there is life altering inside us, growing!
Creatures,
awesome and alive.
Utterly resplendent and putrid,
they dictate our physical climate until this said resolution.

Until I see your face.

And in the instantaneous combination

Of…
Loss…
Of…

Breath…

and kaleidoscope colors from the ejected poisons of the bugs inside force me to pull out magnificent wings from inside my mouth and under my tongue that hinder me to speak;
Infected.
They have been latched onto a beating heart that feels as though it has paused in one moment too close to death that not unlike now the rush of passions and fairness of all life swarm again culminating this discourse in the one foremost principle:
the task of one shy utterance;
a single